Project Buddy program stresses need for adult and youth companionship

With the increasingly frantic tempo of modern life, there seem to be more and more emotional casualties all the time. These may be middle class people, or poor people; young people, or old people. When the emotional catastrophes of modern life involve parents, the parallel effect on children is often devastating.

Or, when a parent is away from the home for a long period of time for whatever reason, an imbalance in the home where there are children can create a real need for concern and affection from an adult.

Those are some of the reasons for the Volunteers in Action Project Buddy program—to give male and female children between the ages of six and 16 one-to-one experiences in caring and sharing with responsible adult males and females between the ages of 18 and 80.

When the program started in 1971, it was a pioneer effort on the Monterey Peninsula. By 1973, there were 14 matches of big and little buddies. Now, there are 50 active matches, and a backlog of more than 80 people needing to be matched.

That's one of the first challenges facing Gordon Terry, 23, the new director of the Project Buddy program, with offices at 880 Broadway in Seaside. Terry seems well qualified for the position, since he brings a wide background in psychology and counseling to his present job.

One of his special areas of interest is schizophrenia, a type of mental illness which Terry sees as an unnecessary, and too frequent, by-product of the tensions of survival in today's world. One of the key factors in the schizophrenic profile is abandonment—either emotional or physical—in childhood. That's one reason Terry has a strong interest in getting the right big buddies matched with the little buddies.

Terry estimates there are many more potential little buddies in the community than can be served by the current big buddies. The Volunteers in Action organization says in a brochure that "there are approximately 1,200 to 1,600 kids on the Monterey Peninsula who could use a friend."

Terry pointed out that the purpose of the Big Buddy program is not to provide entertainment or recreational programs for youth, but to give them the awareness that some responsible adult will be there to listen to them and to share with them on a regular basis.

"There's a lot to be done in matching people," he said. My counseling background helps in this; I'm in the process of setting up a system for this now. The program has expanded to the point where you have to have it organized."

Project Buddy has been without a regular director since July, when former director Marlene Russell was fired. Terry came aboard at the beginning of August.

"We need 30 big buddies," Terry said. "They must be able to spend at least two hours a week with their little buddy. They must be reasonably mature and stable, and be able to relate well to people and the community."

Terry said the ideal big buddy "has an understanding of himself and what he wants, and what he expects of the program."

"A person who volunteers just for his own needs isn't a particularly good person for the program," he stressed. "We want a person who realizes his own needs and the needs of the child. This is not a program to replace a parent who is missing, and not a program to give the existing parent free time."

"The purpose is to provide adult companionship for the younger person."

Terry said participants in the program come from all over

Seaside withdraws from gas tax fund agreement

The Seaside City Council stood firm on its intention to pull out of an agreement with other cities of the county on the use of state gas tax funds at its regular meeting last Thursday.

The council agreed to give 60-day notice to the other cities of Monterey County that signed a special agreement with Seaside in 1970 concerning the allocation of those funds of its intent to withdraw from that agreement.

The special agreement was that Seaside would not apply for and not accept state gas tax revenues based on the added population of the city because of the annexation of a portion of Fort Ord. But, the council said, since then other cities have taken the gas tax funds when they were no more entitled to them than is Seaside to those based on the Fort Ord population. Monterey, for instance, receives gas tax funds based on government lands within its city limits.

And the potential incorporation of Marina would further diminish gas tax revenues to the entire county, since some funds would accrue to Marina, should incorporation succeed, based on a portion of Fort Ord which would be included in the newly-formed city, the council argues.

At issue is some $40,000 in additional gas tax funds which Seaside would realize, in addition to its current revenue of $80,000 from the gas tax funds, bringing the total to some $120,000.

Mayor Henry Hibino of Salinas was present at the council meeting to ask that the Seaside council not pull out of the agreement. The action by Seaside would decrease total gas tax revenues to all the other cities in the county.

The gas tax funds are based on total gasoline taxes collected in the state and are apportioned to cities on the basis of their population, for use in maintenance of select system streets.

"We ask you to reverse your decision and to abide by this contract," Hibino entreated of the council.

Letters were also sent from Monterey and Pacific Grove councils asking that Seaside abide by the agreement.

"We're not the first to renege," said Councilman Joe Cota.

"Why are we so unique? Why is Marina not agreeing?"

"I think the mayors of the different cities have reason to be concerned, but I am concerned about services for the people here in the community," said Councilman Glenn Olea.

Seaside taxpayers will be pleased to find that their city tax bill is going down this year, at the same time that everything else is going up.

The city council adopted the 1975-76 budget of $3.3 million, and a tax rate reduced from $1.90 to $1.85 per $100 assessed valuation.

For the homeowner with a $30,000 residence, for example, the total reduction in taxes would be $3.75. The total amount of property tax revenue in this year's budget is $95,455, of which $350,400 goes for general funds, $181,685 for retirement funds, and $363,370 for park and recreation purposes.

The total city tax rate breaks down into 44 cents per $100 assessed valuation to support the general fund, 47 cents for the retirement and pension fund, and 94 cents to support parks and recreation facilities and programs.

The total estimated revenues for the fiscal year are $3,262,803. Total estimated expenditures are $3,357,169. The total reserves in the budget from last year are $663,154, and the estimated reserves from this year are $568,788.

The city council also unanimously adopted a resolution setting the speed limit in the Gateway Auto Center at 15 miles per hour, following complaints from auto dealers there that traffic was zooming through the center and using its roads as thoroughfares. The lowered speed limit takes effect in 30 days.

In another matter relating to the Auto center, the city council approved sending a letter to Congressman Burt Talcott asking for his assistance in processing loans to finance purchase of land and construction for small businesses in the Gateway Project.

The letter, over the signature of Mayor B.J. Dolan, said the non-profit Seaside Local Development Co., which was organized to assist applicants in obtaining loans through the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 for the Gateway Redevelopment Project, has run into difficulties in getting loans processed.

Two artists exhibit this month at city hall

Two Northern California artists will display their works in Seaside City Hall during the month of September.

They are Wah Chang of Carmel and Gilbert Boyd of Palo Alto. Boyd's paintings will adorn the walls, while Wah Chang will exhibit stills from the movie "The King and I" for which he created masks.

Wah Chang will also exhibit several puppets he fashioned for "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm" as well as a dinosaur puppet from "The Land of the Lost," television series.

Chang is a member of the Carmel Art Association, and currently exhibits at the Limber Gallery in Monterey, as well as at several other galleries in California.

He began his career before the age of 10 as an artist, exhibiting etchings and block prints in national galleries. His work was shown in art galleries at the City of Paris in San Francisco, The Palace of the Legion of Honor, The Berkeley League of Fine Arts, Gumps, and at other locations on the West Coast.

When in his early 20s, Chang joined the staff in the model department at Walt Disney Studios.

In the 30 years that followed, his skills were used by many of the major Hollywood studios. The masks for the ballet sequences in "The King and I," and "Can Can" for Twentieth Century Fox were his fabrications.

He formed a studio with two partners, and they created visual special effects for such pictures as "Tom Thumb," "Jack The Giant Killer," "The Seven Faces of Dr. Lao," the Cinerama picture, "The Wonderful World of the Brothers Grimm," "The Time Machine" for which they received two Academy Awards.

Chang now divides his time between the production of his own educational films on wild life conservation and ecology, and the creation of limited editions of exquisite small bronze sculptures.

Let's use the library

(Editorial)

The opening of Seaside's new library is a landmark in the history of the city. This week, the new facility is to throw open its doors to the public in new and expanded facilities.

The building itself is beautiful and will eventually house twice as many volumes as the Emerson Library, which has operated in cramped quarters below the Monterey Grange Hall.

The Monterey County Library System will have responsibility for administration, staffing and stacking of the new library, which is a clear benefit to the city of Seaside, since this method enables the city to have more and better services for less money.

Once the pomp and circumstance surrounding the library's opening has died down, and once the politicians have taken all the credit due them (and then some), the question will remain: how much will the citizens of Seaside use the library?

The question is not a superficial one. Those who keep records on such things inform us that the average adult literacy level in this country is somewhere around the eighth or ninth grade level, and deteriorating rapidly.

Certainly, it's simple enough to place the blame on television, on the educational system, and on our fast and highly mobile way of life. All those factors probably have something to do with the loss of interest in reading, learning, and in the English language as a flexible and dynamic medium of expression. Too often, our conversations are almost ape-like, punctuated by grunts, snorts, and meaningless clichés.

Another possible explanation is that Americans have just become too lazy to bother with reading, or with speaking and writing the language properly and fluently. In groping toward a cultural maturity that permits a wider perspective on society and codes of behavior broader than the Puritan ethic, Americans seem to have thrown out the discipline with the dogma.

To many of today's Americans, raised, conditioned, and nurtured on the tube, the very idea of an Abe Lincoln sitting with a book beside the fire in his family's log cabin somewhere in the wilds of Illinois probably seems like romantic fiction.

The production of books in America has also become so tied in with our consumer, high-profit, corporate economic system that as soon as inflationary recession started sinking its teeth into our system, the immediate effect was a reduction in the number of fictional works being published.

Nationwide, America will produce some 120 novels by new authors this year, half the amount published the year before. This is partly because of the economic pressures on the publishing industry and partly because of the decline in reading in America.

All these things add up to the fact that if we cease to read and to learn, we're ready to be manipulated by whatever force there is that wishes to do so. And that's the first step toward losing the freedoms we're supposed to cherish.

It's the same old story: if we don't exercise what we have, we lose it, including our minds. Therefore, let's made good use of the new Seaside library. That's what it's here for.

Letter to the editor

Dear Editor:

As state advisor for the Black Student Congress, I have asked all Black Student Unions in the state to begin organizing an immediate boycott against every Long's Drug Store in California.

The reasons for this boycott are the racist hiring practices and the racist attitude that has been overtly demonstrated toward black people by the Long's Drug store in Monterey.

The manager of this store has openly admitted that he does not want black people in his store because "they only rip you off." He has refused to advertise in our local newspaper and does not have any black people working in his store. In fact, a black man who had formerly been a manager of another drug store was not hired when he applied for a lesser position at Long's.

It is hoped that black people and other concerned people throughout the state will join black students in their boycott against Long's. These black students have all made a commitment to continue the boycott until the Long's Store in Monterey changes its hiring policy and demonstrates a more positive and humanistic attitude toward black people in the Seaside-Monterey area.

A 'Cute Political Trick'?

Craig--'I Still Think So'

Four well-known Seaside residents will be heard in a verbal slugfest tonight when a recorded panel discussion on "Current Political Issues" in Seaside is broadcast over a local radio station.

Councilman George Pollock and Pat Patterson will be teamed up against Councilman John Craig and Herman Olsen in a vigorous and at times vituperative debate over current moves to recall four of the city council's five members.

In tonight's episode, Seaside politicians hurl a barrage of accusations against each other—a few new ones, but most of them warmed-over. Most startling of the lot is the charge, made by Patterson, that Craig had termed as a "cute political trick" Mayor Oldemeyer's recent request for a grand jury investigation of Seaside.

Patterson, in turn, finds himself challenged to an "IQ (intelligence) contest" by Herman Olsen. Olsen, president of the Ord Terrace Property Owners Association, identifies himself as a "non-combatant" in Seaside's political "wars" at the beginning of the broadcast, but warning to his subject as he appears to have little in common with positions held by Patterson and Pollock.

Much of the half-hour broadcast is larded by bitter attacks and counter-attacks, familiar to most attendants of recent city council meetings.

Craig, who says he ran for the council because he considers it his "civic duty," triggers the fireworks by challenging Pollock and Patterson to explain why they "instigated" the recall attempt against himself, Oldemeyer, and Councilman Joe Cota.

Heatedly denying that he has been an "instigator," Pollock charges, as on prior occasions, that "secret meetings" by the other council members constitute one of the main reasons he would like to see his three colleagues ousted from office. Pollock, together with Patterson, alleged that the other council members have been making agreements among themselves prior to sessions of the council.

Seaside Store Owners Consider

'One Night' Opening for Shops

A special merchants committee meeting was held last night to discuss the possibility of all Seaside stores remaining open the same evening each week.

The meeting in the Chamber of Commerce was the result of a survey made by the News-Sentinel in conjunction with the chamber to determine what night the majority of stores wished to remain open.

It has long been the hope that all merchants could agree on a single night, but until now, no such unity has occurred. From a poll covering 36 business establishments along Fremont Boulevard and Broadway, the consensus was to try Thursday night.

Results of the poll line the shops up this way: Many shops which are now open on Fridays are dissatisfied with that night and feel that Thursdays would be better while those already open Thursday evenings are satisfied.

A number of stores do not care which night is selected, but believe it is important that all stores agree on the same evening. A few shops adamantly hold to Thursday and won't change.

Eight merchants find Friday evenings better because continued advertising has made people aware of their late night, although one shop owner suggested Friday night is his slowest, and he would like to build it up.

Car Club is More Than Hot Rod Collection

There was a time on the late 1940s and early 50s when the term "hot rod" sent elderly ladies scurrying for cover, and even hardy drivers of stock cars wondered what the younger generation was coming to.

Those were the days of the post-war period when young people were looking for quick thrills and had not quite found themselves in the fast-changing world around them. It became the mania of the mechanical age to strip fenders from old V-8 and Model A Fords, install "gimmicks" for increasing engine speed, and gun around the countryside of city boulevards, ignoring speed limits and pedestrians in the new quest for thrills.

On the West Coast, Los Angeles emerged as the breeding pot but the hot rod rage soon spread throughout the entire state as well as through other sections of the country.

Seaside was no exception, long a car-conscious town, with rows of garages and auto shops, it was natural that the young people of the area should pick up the car craze.

Inevitably, as in thousands of other communities throughout the U.S., unrestrained, sometimes reckless speed came to Seaside. Among the "rod" enthusiasts of the area were seven Seasideers with varying degrees of automotive knowledge who wanted to improve the status of the modified automobile.

They began meeting to discuss their favorite topic and soon hit on the idea of an automotive club dedicated not only to speed, but safety, also. Thus, the Seaside Slow Pokes were born.

Of the original seven members only four remain. They are Mike Homen, Steve San Paolo, Al Berkquist, and Frank Ventura. The club is now three years old and has a standing membership of 35, with many more on the waiting list.

Homen is the president of the organization and San Paolo the vice president. These two are fired with an enthusiasm for good automobiles which goes far beyond the "rod" stage.

And, indeed, the Slow Pokes have traveled a considerable distance since their humble beginnings in Homen's garage three years ago.

Our beans don't bend.

(They're so firm and crisp, they break instead.)

Just another reason why Mom brings DEL MONTE home.

Sociology professor Louis Balsam:

'Marriage for most people is the best bet'

By LISA LEDIN

Emeritus Sociology Professor Louis Balsam has been called back from retirement to teach a course at Monterey Peninsula College on the male-female relationship.

His return comes after 15 years of retirement from a teaching and research career in Europe, China and Australia, as well as some 25 years of teaching experience at MPC.

"I was called back," he said, "to discuss the intense changes in the relationship between men and women today." Do these changes represent advances?

His twinkling eyes express zest for living, and his deep concern for the well-being and survival of human feeling in a rapidly changing society.

"I want to make students aware that man and woman together form the core relationship of the human race. Unless the man and woman relationship is sound and mutual, much of life goes sour. It is not only the core relationship, but it is the vital stabilizer of life; the vital emotional impact that makes life significant for most human beings."

Balsam received his Ph.D. at Harvard in Sociology and has lived and devoted his life to the subject of human relationships. This well attended course attracts mixed groups, including parents, and even grandparents.

In the lectures, he traces the changes undergone in the last 100,000 years from man's savage and instinctive sexual behavior to the refinement that evolved as the human brain developed from the primitive ape stages to civilization.

"Primitive people operated automatically by instinct, acting not much differently than animals. For at least half a million years, human sex life was fundamentally the drive of nature. With the rapidly developing brain came a refinement of the sexual impulse, and the slow beginnings of love."

At a time when students have many questions and qualms concerning women's liberation, Balsam touches a vast subject.

"Men were fed up with hunting and wandering, while women began to make a haven for men in the cave. Man began to understand and like it."

From early agriculturists to current corporation executives, Balsam covers the history of women's roles regarding their partnership with man carefully.

"On the farm, when there were no doctors, schools, bakeries, or clothing stores, it was women who performed these important tasks, acting as an equal partner to the man."

The consequences of industrialization, the impact of war on thousands of widows, Victorian morals and religious ties, are factors discussed to bring the subject of woman's current status to a head.

Balsam sees the discovery of the birth control pill as nothing less than a social revolution.

"Up until that point, women were handicapped and were subject to fathers, then husbands, economically. Now, for the first time, women can be free sexually. Women can go after men openly and fearlessly. Part of this revolution is the gradual acceptance of man and woman living together without marriage."

Because this situation is more socially visible, there are those who fear that the institution of marriage is threatened. Balsam believes that fear is groundless, and that problems that might result are basically individual ones.

"Recent surveys show that a good 60 per cent of women hope that men will marry them," Balsam said. "And men do. My overwhelming advice is that marriage for most people is the best bet, and not to rush into marriage for sexual urgency. This mostly gets you into trouble."

"It takes maturity to live together successfully."

Therefore, living together isn't for everyone, by any means. The great, marvelous benefits of marriage are mutual commitment and sharing."

Balsam tries to explain reasons for the high divorce rate, and the current deterioration of the family unit.

"In this fast paced society, many people tend to overlook the fact that all things worthwhile take self discipline, time, and patience."

"Too many kids are looking for instant satisfaction. This attitude is 'We want what we want what we want right now. Why walk four blocks when we can step into the car? Why chop celery and slowly simmer the broth when we can just open a package of instant soup?'"

"The result of this impatience is intense superficiality and disenchantment. People on the farms largely had continuity and patience. With this growing impatience, we run the risk of going full circle back to a primitive state," he said.

Balsam urges students to ask themselves a few questions whether they plan to live together or wed: 1) How mature am I? 2) Who is this partner I plan to share my life with? and 3) Why do I want to do it?

"They must realize that marriage requires increasing cooperative companionship."

"Love today should no longer be mere instinct. Love is putting the total well being of the other person equal to or above one's own."

LOUIS BALSAM

the Peninsula: Carmel Valley, Monterey, Pebble Beach, Seaside. They all have in common their need for a balanced influence of adult male and female personalities.

"Sometimes, we get kids that have both parents, simply because one parent is not able to be in a working relationship with the child, because of emotional inaccessibility or some other factor."

The program involves not only big and little buddies of the same sex with each other, but males with females, as well. The participants generally become involved with the program through word of mouth contact, and through referrals from various social service agencies.

Little buddies, Terry pointed out, "come from all socioeconomic and racial backgrounds."

The general thrust is to provide each little buddy with "a balance in dealing with problems as they come up, which helps with the development of a healthy personality," Terry said.

"We encourage natural activities, as opposed to entertainment activities. These could be building models, playing cards, going fishing. It's a companionship—not a recreational program. The buddies are encouraged not to spend a lot of money," he said.

Jazz festival announces Sunday concert

The 18th Annual Monterey Jazz Festival, Sept. 19 through 21, has announced its Sunday afternoon concert. As it has for the last several years, the Sunday afternoon show will feature a series of major jazz artists in concert with youthful California high school performers.

The program includes: Chuck Mangione, Bill Evans, Pat Williams, Benny Golson, John Lewis, Ladd McIntosh and Don Schamber in various contexts with the 1975 All Star High School Jazz Band and members of the Oakland Youth Symphony Orchestra.

The concert, Sunday afternoon, Sept. 21, is scheduled to start at 1:30 p.m.

A special pre-concert show at 12:30 p.m. will feature the Richmond High School Jazz Band and the Berkeley High School Band Competition held earlier this year. The competition is sponsored annually by the Monterey Jazz Festival.

As in past years the Festival will be held in the 7,000-seat outdoor arena on the Monterey County Fairgrounds. It will consist of five separately-programmed concerts—Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings and Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Set to be featured in the main Sunday afternoon concert are: The High School All Star Band conducted by Ladd McIntosh and Don Schamber and featuring Benny Golson, tenor saxophonist, performing some of his own compositions; compositions by McIntosh and Schamber and by pianist John Lewis.

Also on the program, the All Star Band, augmented by members of the Oakland Youth Symphony Orchestra under direction of Denis de Coteau, will present: the music of Pat Williams, Grammy Award-winning composer-arranger; Pianist Bill Evans performing "Symbiosis" by Claus Ogerman and "In Memoriam" by John Lewis. Lewis will conduct the performance of his own music; the music of Chuck Mangione, multi-talented trumpet and electric piano artist and composer-arranger.

Tickets for the Sunday afternoon show and other shows in the festival series are on sale at major box offices.

Expanded ethnic studies programs get underway at college

The Ethnic Studies Division at MPC begins a new school year with an expanded and attractive program that involves 12 "new courses," all adapted to students from all ethnic backgrounds as well as ethnic studies majors and non-majors.

The expansion of the program is attributed to the combined energies of community involvement, the students, and the ethnic studies instructors, said James Stevenson, division chairman.

He added that ethnic studies is making an "all-out" effort to bring more women into the program which should result ultimately into a surge in enrollment with more female students.

He said enrollment increased from 767 in the fall of 1974 to 1,248 in the spring of 1975, with a net increase of more than 400 students. By sex, however, the trend in enrollment has been invariably high with men and low with women.

In an attempt to make this enrollment trend compatible, one of the new courses offered for women is entitled: "Ethnic Minority Women in Politics." This course is oriented on a survey of the role of ethnic minority women in the social, political, and economic world of today's society.

"There is a vast need for more minority women to get back into industry and take leading roles in other major segments of American society," said Stevenson.

Also indicative of the Ethnic Studies expanded program is a course entitled: "Psychological Study of Today's Ethnic Minority Youth." This course, for instance, deals with a survey of the emotional and psychological problems of ethnic minority youth in today's society.

Among the new programs that ethnic studies will feature during the new school year will be its weekly group counseling sessions for all ethnic minority students and Ethnic Awareness Day.

Ethnic Awareness Day is an annual event, scheduled in the spring, and designed to focus attention on the rich cultural heritage of the various ethnic groups on the Peninsula.

Here is a brief synopsis of the "12 new courses" being offered this fall at MPC:

Bucholz honored for service

The Department of the Army certificate of appreciation for patriotic civilian service has been awarded to Rus Bucholz, the first such presentation ever made to a civilian employee with the Army Combat Developments Experimentation Command at Fort Ord.

The citation, which recognizes off duty activities by Bucholz while working with Army personnel at Fort Ord and Hunter Liggett Military Reservation notes that his "enthusiasm in assisting his fellow man has contributed immeasurably to the education and morale of personnel...thus building a well-rounded soldier, better equipped and motivated to fulfill the Army's mission."

As a staff officer and instructor with U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary Flotilla 44 in Monterey, Bucholz developed an accredited program of instruction in seamanship and recreational boating safety for soldiers throughout the Fort Ord complex.

In addition, as a club officer and area governor for Toastmasters International, his "guidance and influence provided incentive and opportunity for numerous members of the military community to realize marked self improvement in communicative skills."

The award was presented by Brig. Gen. Donald F. Packard, CDEC commander.

COLONEL BRAUNSTEIN

Braunstein retires

Col. Howard H. Braunstein, Chief of Staff for the past two years at Fort Ord, will retire from active Army service on Aug. 29 ending a career that spanned more than 31 years.

Colonel Braunstein will be honored with a Retirement Parade on the Headquarters Parade Field at 11 a.m. Aug. 29. Military and civilian friends of the Chief of Staff will be welcomed at the Parade.

Born in San Francisco, he entered the Army at the Presidio of Monterey in November 1942. He was commissioned the following year at Camp Barkley, Texas, and served in the Pacific Theater of Operations for the duration of World War II.

Following the war, the colonel was assigned to a tank battalion in Europe and, returning to the United States served as a member of the faculty at the Command and General Staff College after which he returned to Europe serving with the 14th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

Just prior to coming to Fort Ord, he served at SHAPE Headquarters in Belgium and as an Advisor with the Army Advisory Group in Vietnam. His initial assignment at Ft. Ord in September 1972 was that of Director of Plans and Training until he was named Chief of Staff in August 1973.

Colonel Braunstein is married to the former Pat Hutchings of San Francisco. The couple makes their home in Oak Hills near Salinas. The Braunsteins have two children, Barbara (20), and Mark (19). The family plans to make their retirement home in the area.

The retiring Chief of Staff numbers among his awards and decorations the Legion of Merit with two Oak Leaf clusters, the Bronze Star Medal with an Oak Leaf Cluster, and the Joint Services Commendation Medal.

New audiology center

A new audiology center has been opened by Behavioral Sciences Institute at Driftwood Hospital in Monterey, Gene England, president of BSI, announced. The facility will provide services to people with hearing problems and will develop new services and programs for them.

Clayton Ravsten, a clinical audiologist, has recently joined the BSI faculty. He has a Master's Degree in audiology and will provide services to area residents on a not-for-profit basis.

Although the BSI research and administrative facility is located in Carmel Highlands, the audiology center is located in Monterey for greater convenience to area residents and referring physicians and teachers.

One of the greatest needs, Ravsten said, is determining whether a person needs a hearing aid and if so which aid would be most beneficial and affordable by the patient. To make these determinations, Ravsten works on referrals from ear specialists and other physicians. If it is determined that an aid would be beneficial, he then recommends a specific aid and has patients try it before purchasing it.

Ravsten also indicated that helping a person learn how to use a new hearing aid is crucial to its success as an aid.

Ravsten can be reached at Driftwood Hospital, Telephone 372-2026.
